this book offers a novel perspective on the intersection of translation and narration in literary translation by investigating how three translations of shuihu zhuan present the original narrative mode to the target readership in terms of four narrative elements voice commentary point of view and motif in different periods of history it not only validates but also quantifies the differences in strategy making patterns between translators as well as between different narratological categories the established theoretical frameworks including a narrative descriptive model and a sociological explanatory framework and the data collected may provide methodological and empirical support for further studies on shifts of narrative features in translation the tendencies manifested by different translators and identified by the study may also shed new light on the teaching and learning of translation skills the book offers a valuable reference guide for scholars practitioners translators and graduate students in the fields of e g language translation literature and cultural studies and for anyone with an interest in chinese classical literature chinese english translation narrative studies or cross cultural studies

how could a community of 2000 3000 viking peasants survive in arctic greenland for 430 years ca 985 1415 and why did they finally disappear european agriculture in an arctic environment encountered serious ecological challenges the norse peasants faced these challenges by adapting agricultural practices they had learned from the atlantic and north sea coast of norway norse greenland was the stepping stone for the europeans who first discovered america and settled briefly in newfoundland ca ad

1000 the community had a global significance which surpassed its modest size in the last decades scholars have been nearly unanimous in emphasising that long term climatic and environmental changes created a situation where Norse agriculture was no longer sustainable and the community was ruined a secondary hypothesis has focused on ethnic confrontations between Norse peasants and Inuit hunters in the last decades ethnic violence has been on the rise in Eastern Europe the Middle East and parts of Africa in some cases it has degenerated into ethnic cleansing this has strengthened the interest in ethnic violence in past societies challenging traditional hypotheses is a source of progress in all science the present book does this on the basis of relevant written and archaeological material respecting the methodology of both sciences

The High Middle Ages have been seen as an important point within the development of governmental and administrative bureaucracy as well as a time in which there was frequent conflict this volume addresses the methods by which violence was regulated and mitigated and peaceful relations were re-established in High Medieval Europe by studying the restraint of violence and the imposition of peace the chapters in this volume contribute to interdisciplinary discussions about the effects that violence had on medieval societies the wide ranging geographical scope of this volume invites comparisons to be made in relation to how violence was restrained and peace established in different settings the chapters in the first part of this volume address the issue of how violence was moderated and curbed during and following periods of conflict the second part explores attempts to maintain peace and the processes which developed to deal with those viewed as having broken the peace the final part of this volume explores the ways in which conflict was avoided through the maintenance of positive relationships between individuals and groups this book will be of interest to both academics and students interested in conflict the restraint of violence and peacemaking in medieval societies as well as those working on ritual and conflict resolution in any historical period
